Explanatory notes

- Raw score was translated into a scaled score which ranged from 80 to 120
- You had to score 3 on all three tests to achieve a scaled score
- A scaled score should be directly comparable each year to measure progress
- Progress measures in 2016 now work in a similar way to current primary value-added measures or Progress 8 in secondary schools. A school's score was calculated by comparing pupils' KS2 results against those of all pupils nationally who had similar starting points. Pupils were assigned to prior attainment groups based on their key stage 1 results. The department confirmed what score a school needed to get to have made 'sufficient progress' after the tests had been sat. There are no longer individual child progress measures
